Moral distress occurs when professionals cannot carry out what they believe to be ethically appropriate actions because of systemic constraints or barriers.

During this presentation, you will learn:

1. What is moral distress and how moral distress is inter-connected with ethical dilemmas along with other sequelae of working in trauma-exposed environments
2. How moral distress presents in individuals and teams/groups
3. What resources and supports are available to you and your team/group to address ethical ambiguity and moral distress
